Remuneration principles

Exel Composites' remuneration principles are developed to promote the company's strategy, the competitiveness and long-term financial success of the company and to contribute to the development of the company's shareholder value.

The company's remuneration schemes aim to increase the long-term commitment of the Board of Directors and the President and CEO to promote the interests of the company and its shareholders as well as to motivate and reward key individuals in the achievement of strategic targets.

To ensure alignment of remuneration with the company's strategy, financial targets and corporate values as well as an efficient risk management, the remuneration principles are based on predetermined and measurable performance and result criteria. To ensure a competitive and appropriate remuneration, the remuneration components are compared to the practices of comparable companies.

At Exel Composites the remuneration of employees is based on the company's strategic targets. Remuneration is an entity that comprises of several different components. In addition to monetary salary paid to all, the employee may be part of a short-term incentive plan or of different incentive or performance rewards. The higher in the organization the role of the employee is, the larger part of his/her remuneration is comprised of different remuneration components. In addition to the President and CEO and Exel Leadership Team other selected key individuals may also be part of a long-term incentive program. Additionally, the employee may be entitled to different fringe benefits such as a car and a phone benefit or a sports and culture benefit.

Decision-making process concerning remuneration

The company's Board of Directors prepares the company's remuneration policy. The remuneration policy is presented to the general meeting at least every four years and whenever material changes are proposed. The company is entitled to make other than material changes, such as technical changes or changes required by legislation, without presenting the remuneration policy to the general meeting.

In accordance with internal guidelines followed by the company, the governing bodies and individual persons do not participate in the decision-making process concerning their own remuneration nor in making such decisions where the remuneration or his/her interest conflicts with the company's interest. The aim thereby is to ensure that the decision-making concerning remuneration is fair and objective.

President and CEO

Remuneration of the Board of Directors and the President and CEO

Board of Directors

The remuneration of the Board of Directors is decided annually by the shareholders at the Annual General Meeting. The remuneration of the Board of Directors may be composed of a fixed annual fee as well as variable remuneration components such as a meeting fee or other fees that are paid for attendance at Board and committee meetings and other similar all-day Board assignments. The Chairman and Vice Chairman of the Board may receive a raised fee or meeting fee. The general meeting may decide also on other remuneration criteria and remuneration components in accordance with the proposal of the Shareholders' Nomination Board.

The rewards of the Board members may be paid in money or in the company's shares in part or in full. Board members are encouraged to retain the shares they have received in their ownership for the duration of their Board membership.

President and CEO

The remuneration of the President and CEO comprises a fixed base salary, short-term and long-term incentives and other benefits.

The purpose of the President and CEO's base salary is to provide a competitive remuneration basis, that allows focus on taking care of the role's duties and of the implementation of the company's long-term strategy. The base salary is reviewed annually taking into consideration the company's result, personal performance and market conditions.

The President and CEO's pension is determined in accordance with the statutory Finnish employee pension scheme (TyEL) that links the benefits directly to the President and CEO's earnings. The President and CEO may be entitled to a supplementary defined contribution pension plan in accordance with the market practice. The President and CEO's retirement age is 63 years.

The terms of service of the President and CEO are determined in a written service contract approved by the Board of Directors. The notice period defined in the service contract of the President and CEO is aligned with the market practice. In case of termination by the company a severance pay corresponding to 12 months' salary may be paid in addition to salary during the notice period.

Variable remuneration

Short-term incentive programs

Exel Composites' short-term incentive program covers all employees. The objective of the annual incentive program is, on an annual basis, to commit the management to achieving the company's most important financial and other performance targets that support the company's strategy.

The structure, measurement and target levels of the annual incentive programs are determined, set and may vary depending on the decision of the Board of Directors at a given time. The targets of the President and CEO are primarily based on the Group financial performance and operational targets.

The Board of Directors may decide on a maximum short-term incentive opportunity of 50-100% of annual base salary for the President and CEO. The short-term incentive is paid out in money.

Based on current remuneration schemes, the payment of potential rewards when the employment has been terminated depends on the reason for the termination of employment. In principle, no reward will be paid to an individual if his or her employment or service with the company ends before the reward payment. In case the employment is terminated based on certain specifically defined reasons, part of the reward may be paid based on the terms of current remuneration schemes.

Long-term incentive programs

The President and CEO, Exel Leadership Team and other selected key individuals in the Group may be part of Exel Composites' long-term incentive programs, which may be monetary or share-based. The objectives of the programs are to align the interests of the management with those of the company's shareholders and, thus, to promote shareholder value creation, to commit the management to achieving the company's strategic targets and to retain the company's key individuals.

The structure, measurement and target levels of the long-term incentive programs are determined, set and may vary depending on the decision of the Board of Directors at a given time. The Board of Directors may decide on one or several structures.

The reward of the programs is based on key performance figures and other measurable criteria decided by the Board of Directors. The criteria may measure absolute or proportional performance.

In case of interleaving incentive programs within the limits of a remuneration plan, the Board of Directors decides on the start, conditions of the earning period and the length of each individual incentive program. No reward will be paid to an individual if his or her employment or service with the company ends before the reward payment unless the executive is leaving the company due to retirement or unless the Board decides otherwise. The programs may also include a lock-up period, until the end of which the restriction on leaving the company is extended.

The company maintains a share ownership recommendation policy that concerns the members of the Exel Leadership Team. Each member of the Exel Leadership Team is expected to accumulate and maintain a minimum share ownership in Exel Composites representing in value the executive's annual base salary. Each member of the Exel Leadership Team is expected to retain at least 50% of shares received under incentive programs until the recommended share ownership level is reached. The members of the Exel Leadership Team are not expected to invest own funds for accumulating his/her share ownership.

Deferral and possible clawback of remuneration

The company's Board of Directors is in exceptional situations entitled to restrict or reject the payment of performance rewards when considered in the interest of the company by the Board of Directors. In addition, the Board of Directors is in limited exceptional situations of misuse entitled to clawback an already paid reward.

Remuneration elements agreed prior to the presentation of this remuneration policy

The Board of Directors reserves the right, without limitation by this remuneration policy, to pay all rewards, benefits and compensations (including using judgment in their payout and amount) that the company has already decided on, agreed to or committed to before this remuneration policy was presented to the annual general meeting.

Requirements of temporary deviation

It is possible to deviate temporarily from the company's remuneration policy in certain situations and in order to ensure the company's long-term interest. These situations include for example a change of the President and CEO, a corporate arrangement and changes in regulations. Deviation from the remuneration policy requires approval by the Board of Directors. The deviation may concern any part of remuneration and any component presented in this remuneration policy.

Monitoring of the materialization of the remuneration policy

The Shareholders' Nomination Board monitors and evaluates the materialization of the remuneration policy for the Board of Directors and how the remuneration policy supports the achievement and implementation of the company's strategic targets.

The Board of Directors monitors and evaluates the Group's remuneration schemes, including the materialization of the remuneration policy for the President and CEO and the competitiveness of the remuneration schemes and how the materialized remuneration supports the achievement of the company's strategic targets and long-term financial success.
